8 Great Looks
for Fall

Haute Hotel
Cuisine

Aug & Sept issue

Jason Taylor may have made an impression with his powerful footwork on Dancing With the Stars, but he and his wife, Katina, are making a powerful difference in South Florida through the Jason Taylor Foundation. The Taylors lead our annual look at those who use their Powers for Good. We'll also size up the best fall fashion, check into haute hotel cuisine and step into some well-designed indoor oases – just don't call them bathrooms.

The Indoor Oasis

Liliana Korn Custy designed this master bathroom in a Sunny Isles Beach penthouse with a chromotherapy Kohler Sök tub and ceiling-mount shower above the tub and double shower.

A bathroom is no longer the room design forgot. Functional? Yes. But today we want our bathrooms to have as much style as our living rooms and kitchens. Fine quality floors. Soaking tubs that create colors and fragrances. Showers with multiple shower heads. Welcome to the trophy bathroom.

Clients with a winter residence in Pilar, near Buenos Aires, told her to design a bathroom for their teenaged granddaughter: "They told me to do whatever she wants," Custy says. "If she asks you to bring her the moon, you do it."

She didn't ask for the moon, but she did ask for a claw-foot bathtub and a fantasy. The room's wall design was based on Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, and the mirror and vanity cabinet feature an art nouveau custom design with wooden and iron sculptures.

"I like everything new," Custy says. "I don't like to repeat anything in my design. I like change, and I give it to my clients."
