Argentinean architect/designer Liliana Korn's design flair and 25-year experience arrived in South Florida recently, with a commission from New York Advertising CEO, Clive Lewis, for his 7,000 sq.ft penthouse, on Oceania Island.

This project required sensitivity for the blend of Euro-minimalism and classic design of the past, which the client wanted. The result is a bright space reflecting Korn's trademark interplay of comfort, modernity and elegance – expressed in lighting, colors, spatial volumes and relationships.

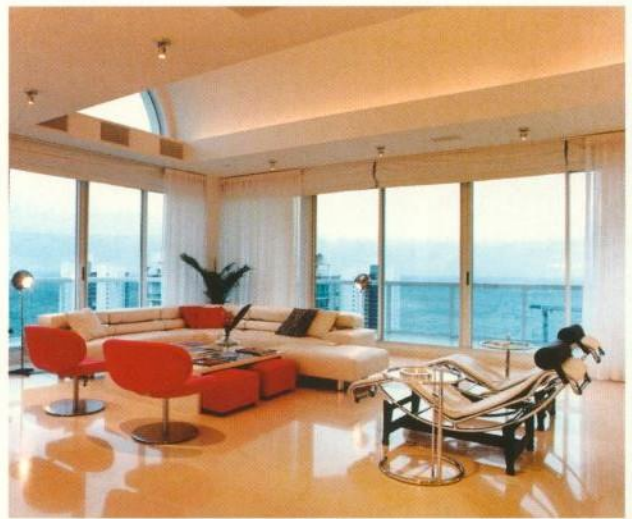

Prior to opening her South Florida studio, Korn, who speaks English, Spanish and French, specialized in private residences for clients in South America, in Buenos Aires, the South of France and South Florida, including several residences for the Sabatini tennis family.

Expressing her firm's philosophy Korn says: "My greatest reward is when a client tells me that the home we have created is easy to live in and that it meets all their expectations. If we win awards, as we have many times in the past we'll accept them gracefully but, our objective is always to create homes which function easily and the client is proud to own."

A minimalist B&B credenza provides a clean backdrop for two custom Corbusier Chaises.

The lounge area achieves a simple, yet color-rich harmony using Giorgio Saporiti's low-profile "Rialto" sectional with two Capellini "Sunset" swiveling chairs – capitalizing on the high-rise views of the ocean.

A signature finish, 36" x 36" polished French limestone, provides visual integrity throughout – shown in the master en suite bathroom which also features the unique ceiling faucet of the Kohler "Sok" spa.

A drop-ceiling dramatizes the hallway and provides a monochromatic interplay of textures focusing on the owner's baby-grand piano.

Natural beech wood and chrome bar stools complement the textural drama of the travertine stone accent wall, serving as a contrast to the clean lines of the satin-white glass bar top. Simple pendants complete the geometrical combination of linear planes and circular shapes.
